

COP 27

ECO-COMMITTEE PRESENTATION

COP27

CONTENTS

- What is COP27? / What will be discussed
- How does COP26 affect COP27?
- Why is COP27 important?
- Objectives
- Conclusion

COP 27

COP27

WHAT IS COP27?

COP27 is an annual meeting of governments who have signed agreements such as the Paris Agreement in order for them to discuss the climate. COP stands for “conference of parties” and will be taking place for the 27th time, being held in Egypt.

COP27

WHAT WILL BE DISCUSSED AT COP27?

Topics that will be discussed include plans on reducing emissions, helping countries (especially a lot of developing countries) with handling climate change, revising the plans for the 2015 Paris Agreement, where 194 countries committed to limiting the the rise in global average temperature to below two degrees and resolving some things discussed at COP26.

COP27

HOW DOES GLASGOW COP26 AFFECT COP27?

In the last COP conference many decisions were made and the Paris Agreement was also reviewed. This was also something which helped build on the finalised goal of having all countries work on keeping the climate change to 1.5 degrees as well as curbing deforestation, speeding up change to electric vehicles and more.

This also affects COP27 as many topics that were brought up last year such as helping countries deal

COP27

WHY IS COP27 IMPORTANT?

COP27 is important due to many factors. One of them are that as of now global temperatures have risen 1.1 degrees and the goal is 1.5 which is very alarming as rising to 1.7 or 1.8 degrees could cause environments with harmful heat and humidity.

COP27

THE OBJECTIVE OF SOME COUNTRIES

The main goal for COP27 is to keep the temperature rise as close as possible to 1.5 degrees celsius according to the Paris agreement but some countries also have their own objectives.

COP27

OBJECTIVES: CHINA

China has pledged to reduce and curb methane emissions, continuing the promise it made in 2020 to do so. Methane was also included in China's target to reach carbon neutrality before 2060.

COP27

OBJECTIVES: INDIA

India is the only country out of the 20 countries working on major issues of the global economy that is on track to achieve its targets for climate. Its objective is to reduce its emissions intensity of its GDP to 45% by 2030 (from 2005), achieve carbon neutrality by 2070 and about 50% electric power installed capacity from non-fuel sources by 2030

OBJECTIVES: US

The US has stated a few objectives they have for COP27 in order to fight climate change.

One is launching many movements such as a Climate gender equity fund and new exchanges to power youth in order to engage all of society in acting against climate change.

Another is how they will increase the US

Adaptation Fund to $100 million and have

$150 million spent on an Emergency Plan for

Adaptation and Resilience across Africa

ECOP27

UK'S AGENDA

For the UK, this year for COP27 they have decided to build on the legacy of COP27 called the Breakthrough Agenda where the UK acted in order to increase the scale and speed of the development and deployment of clean technologies to drive down costs of this decade. This will expand a global market for clean technologies and make it more

COP27

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, COP27 will be a very important event in regards to how climate change will be handled in terms of finances and less developed countries.

If you are interested in more you may like to read: “What is COP27 and why is it important?” from BBC

THANK YOU

ECO-COMMITTEE